SILVER FIGHT PRECIPITATED

All Sorts of Pilikia Over the Hawaiian Redemption
Bill.

(Special Correspondence.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—For four years there has been waged with only one result so far, a battle between the sound money and silver forces in the United States. Defeat at the polls in two national elections, and in more than one of the Western States, would seem to the ordinary observer to have settled the matter, but even yet there arises occasions when the silver men are able to turn a trick. When they get the chance they take it with all the more certainty and vehemence. The last occasion on which they have showed their power, this time to block legislation, is in the matter of the bill to redeem the coinage of Hawaii. As matters now stand they will either defeat the bill or compel the sound money men to take a back track on some of the amendments they are proposing to have added to it.

The status of the bill was outlined in the last letter to the Advertiser. It is now in committee waiting for report. When it is reported there will be no chance to pass it without either unanimous consent, or by two-thirds vote on suspension of rules. The bill has been handled by Attorney Haywood with consummate skill. It was by a stroke of policy that he was able to get it into the Senate and through that body with the amendment carrying the right of the collector to deposit funds in the local depository, and so sent to the House in the form which will be of the most benefit to the islands. Unfortunately there then arose a question which now promises to lay out the matter.

While the matter which promises to block the bill is one of some moment, it would not have arisen had there been the proper action taken in the House when the bill first came up, and so should the bill fall there the brunt of the blame must be taken by the delegate from the Territory. His position then gave ground for the opposition which prevented the bill being put through by Mr. Knox.

Soon after the failure of the measure at that time, Mr. Hill, of Connecticut, a member of the committee on currency, found that the bill would mean that the Hawaiian currency would be redeemed with silver, and the silver of the island be recouped in the mints in the same denominations which were to be retired. To this Mr. Hill, who is a banker, objected. He based his objection on the grounds that there had been so much discussion and fighting on the matter of coinage of silver dollars, always resulting in the defeat of the silver men, that there should not be now another standard dollar authorized. In this belief he was joined by some of his associates, and he at once announced to Mr. Knox that he would oppose the bill should it come up, so that it would provide that the Secretary of the Treasury could recoup the silver in any form he desired. This would mean that it would go into fractional currency.

On which the silver men are still sore. They do not like the attitude of the Treasury, which is that there shall be no more standard dollars coined. They insist that there shall be no contraction, at least, of the silver currency. They say that should the dollars from Hawaii be taken and replaced with standards, and then the dollars so taken, put into fractional currency, they would witness the contraction of the standard coins to the extent of the dollars so redeemed. To this silver men object strenuously, and their spokesman, Shafter, of Colorado, has announced that while he is now in favor of the bill as it was first reported, that the amendment of Hill will mean that the minority of the House will fight on it. The Democrats have put their case in the hands of Shafter, and they rely on him to prevent anything which would be inimical to the cause of the silver advocates. So it is that there hovers over the Hawaiian bill an element of uncertainty, and in some minds there is a belief that the bill will not be allowed to get through at this session, owing to the complication.

There is no doubt that the men in authority are anxious to have the currency and coinage of the islands redeemed by silver of the United States, which is in their minds the proper course to pursue in all the insular possessions of the United States. There is a fear also that should there be any failure to act at this time that there may be taken some step by speculators to force the Hawaiian currency to a discount on the ground that the government has not decided to make it good on the face value. This should be combated, for should there be failure at this session there will be no doubt of the final success of the bill and the redemption of the money at its face rather than at its bullion value.

AMUSED BY WILCOX.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 18.—There is much amusement being taken by some members of the Senate out of the explanation given by Delegate Wilcox as to the reasons for his taking the position that Hawaiian silver was not on a par with the gold currency of the United States. Wilcox favors the bill as it now stands, and is doing all that he can to secure its passage. But when the fact was thrown into the fire at the time he gave his peculiar explanation as to the relations of the money metals, there was one of his senatorial friends who called him to account for his position. Then it was that Wilcox said:

"You see, we Hawaiians have nothing left to us to show that we ever were a people, and the native Hawaiians do not want their money with the head of the king taken away from them."

"But you don't think there can be two kinds of money in the United States, do you?" was asked.

"Well, we don't know about that, but we want to keep something to show that we once were a people, and that was all that could be gained.

MILES AND WILCOX.

The General Criticized for Honoring the Hawaiian.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—A peculiar turn was given to the Hawaiian squabble today by General Nelson A. Miles, chairman of the inaugural reception committee. General Miles appointed Delegate Wilcox of Hawaii as a member of the committee at the inaugural ball to receive the President and Mrs. McKinley. Coming so soon after the President's appointment of George D. Gear to a judgeship in Hawaii, after Gear had charged Wilcox with treason, some Washington people take General Miles' choice of Wilcox for such a conspicuous place to mean studied affront to the President. General Miles, however, defends his appointment on the grounds of Wilcox's official position, and the fact that Gear's charges were not sustained.

Hawaii's Postage Burned.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Tomorrow morning, according to a Tribune special from Washington, the Postoffice Department will destroy about 54,000 postal cards which belonged to the Republic of Hawaii. There are about 28,000 1-cent and 25,000 2-cent cards to be burned. This last remnant of Hawaii's postal service will be placed in a big furnace especially constructed by the redemption division for the purpose of destroying the postage stamps and postal cards of Hawaii's republican government. Two weeks ago all of the Hawaiian uncancelled postage stamps obtainable were burned. Their face value was about $58,000, but if the department had had the power to sell them, at least $100,000 would have been given for them by enterprising collectors.
